Reconnaissance as the Universal API

by [redacted]

After reconnaissance is finished, the information is usually rendered in a structured format. This is often done using a standard format like JSON or XML. These formats are often used to exchange information between different systems, such as a web browser and a web server.

One of the most common ways to exchange information is through a REST API. REST stands for Representational State Transfer. It is a simple, stateless protocol that uses HTTP to exchange information between a client and a server.

Reconnaissance is often used to gather information about a system or network. This information can be used to identify vulnerabilities, assess the risk of an attack, and plan a response.
